Is the French Cohort Program for you?

The French Cohort Program in Public and International Affairs (FCP) offers you the opportunity to study in Canada's two official languages. This multidisciplinary program, taught primarily in French, allows you to explore political science, French, and history on your path to a Bachelor of Arts degree.

Maybe you have yet to choose a career path, but with the FCP, you will develop valuable knowledge and skills that are in high demand in the workplace, such as:

- Understanding politics in Canada and globally
- Analyzing politics, policies and political movements
- Thinking logically and critically
- Presenting ideas and data clearly
- Offering historical perspectives
- Speaking French and English fluently

Where will you go from here?

One of the greatest advantages of the FCP is that its multidisciplinary approach will open doors to a multitude of career options in various fields:

- Community organizer
- Diplomat or foreign service officer
- Journalist
- Lawyer
- Lobbyist
- Political advisor
- Politician
- Policy analyst
- Project manager
- Public or international relations professional
- Teacher/professor

Although 84 per cent of Canadian employers prefer to hire bilingual candidates, only about 10 per cent of young professionals actually are.

Want to know more?

The FCP offers you a personalized experience with academic and community opportunities from day one:

- Student exchange program in Europe or Québec
- Solid support network with committed professors
- A cohort, a small group of students with whom you will study for the duration of your program
- French language and academic support
- Bursaries and awards exclusive to studies in French
- Complementary student life activities in French (festivals, trips, and more)
- Numerous community projects and bilingual student employment opportunities
